

Point of View

The FSA photographers were often criticized for taking photos that were propaganda, intended to influence how people viewed the New Deal and the conditions of the rural poor during the Great Depression. Look at the Indiana FSA photographs. Are they propaganda? If so, is this good or bad? What is propaganda? Are all photos in some sense propaganda? Did the FSA photographers have specific points of view? Did they try to be neutral?